The nowadays Ukraine is a unique case, indeed. Not a single developed country in the world would take the liberty of introducing sanctions against foreign parliament members only for their claim to recognize those responsible for the Volhynia massacres as war criminals. It's necessary to note that the initiative of the Polish Sejm members is not an anti-Ukrainian bill as it is thought to be in Ukraine but quite an equivalent response to never-ceasing attempts of Ukrainian authority to turn the murderers of thousands of Poles into heroes.

This petition distinctly demonstrates, or rather proves, that Ukrainian authority and Ukrainian people absolutely not sympathize with European values. They are not ready to admit errors of the past and give proper names to things: genocide was genocide, while UPA militants were war criminals.

Deep reform of self-attitude should become the first step of Ukraine towards Europe. For Ukrainians, moving forward is only possible through penitence.
